Application to Rescind a Special Minimum Building Line Block: Frequently Asked Questions

What is a Special Minimum Building Line Block (SMBLB) application, what does it mean and who created the boundary? An SMBLB application provides property owners an opportunity to preserve the building line character of a blockface or two opposing blockfaces. It was supported by property owners within the application boundary, reviewed by Planning and Development staff, and was approved by the Houston City Council. Any new structures built in the application boundary must have a building line greater than or equal to the established Special Minimum Building Line.

What if my building line is less than the designed Special Minimum Building Line?

For example, if a 15-foot Special Minimum Building Line is established for your block, no structures will be permitted to be built with a building line of less than 15 feet. If you currently own a lot with a structure that has a building line that is less than the Minimum Building Line there is no penalty, however, future building lines would need to meet the established Special Minimum Building Line.

What can I build on my lot?

There are no land use restrictions with a Special Minimum Building Line ordinance. Also note that this application does not determine the physical design of buildings, aside from how far they are built from the front property line subject to a Special Minimum Building Line designation. Please note that deed restrictions for building lines may already be imposed on some properties in your neighborhood. In those cases, the more restrictive either the proposed minimum building line or deed restriction will be applied to the property.

Can I add to or rebuild my single-family/multifamily/commercial property?

Yes, if you have an existing single-family lot you are allowed to rebuild or improve your home. If you have an existing commercial or multifamily lot, you are allowed to rebuild or improve the building. Any new residence or addition on your property would need to meet the Special Minimum Building Line. If you decide to add a porch that is habitable or has enough space to add furniture, it must meet the Special Minimum Building Line.

What will happen to my lot if the Special Minimum Building Line Block is rescinded?

Any protection currently provided by the Special Minimum Building Line ordinance would no longer apply to your property.

What happens during the application process?

An applicant to rescind a Special Minimum Building Line Block will submit a completed application packet. You may choose to support this application by signing the Evidence of Support page before its submission. Planning and Development Department staff will review the application and notify residents within the application area that a complete application was submitted.

What if I disagree with this application?

Notification sent to property owners will indicate a 30-day protest period allowing property owners to file a written protest with the Planning and Development Department. If an application to rescind an SMBLB receives at least 67% support when it is submitted to the Planning and Development Department and there is a protest from a property owner within the block, the application will be referred to the Houston Planning Commission. If an application to rescind an SMBLB receives less than 67% support when it is submitted to the Planning and Development Department, the application fails, and no further action shall be taken.

What happens at the Planning Commission?

If a protest is received, interested parties will be given an opportunity to speak at the Planning Commission. The Planning Commission will recommend approval of, or deny, the application to rescind the Special Minimum Building Line Block. If recommended for approval, the application will be forwarded to City Council. If the application is denied by the Planning Commission or City Council, the application may not be resubmitted for an additional five years.

What happens after the City Council?

If the City Council approves the application to rescind the Special Minimum Building Line Block designation, the ordinance will no longer apply to the application area.
