The question does not specify that the HFD employee is on duty during "active jury duty". Since this is not specified one must ~~assume~~ conclude that the employee is off duty while at said "active jury duty". In this scenario answer C is correct because Nothing is required of you as an HFD employee in this situation.

Per Ref No 1-22 D 1. It specifies "When summoned to report for jury duty on a scheduled workday... 1-22 D 2. States Upon release they shall request a validated court slip from court clerk.

The test question does not mention D 1. Statement.

I understand the Table was an omitted source. But, on pg. 84 the text states that the physical properties of an extinguishing agent must match the hazards presented. The only answer that does not list foam as an extinguisher is Answer B. Foam is made with water. The text further goes on to state "Because water conducts electricity, the user would be at considerable risk of electrocution, and the fire would not be extinguished". Therefore I appeal the removal of Question 26 based on the extinguishing agent properties matching the hazard presented.
