HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE SUMMARY:

The James L. Jensen House was individually listed in the National Register of Historic Places on July 17, 1990. It is included within the boundaries of Houston Heights, which was designated as a Multiple Resource Area (MRA) by the National Register Program on June 22, 1983.

HISTORY AND SIGNIFICANCE:

The James L. Jensen House, built in 1914, is a good example of a one-story working man's cottage with Queen Anne style influences that dotted the Houston Heights after the turn-of-the-century. Jensen, a carpenter by trade, contributed to the growth of Houston Heights. He was responsible not only for the construction of this residence, but also built another eight houses from 1915 to 1939. Jensen often purchased discarded railroad cars and used the parts to improve his rental property.

The one-and-a-half-story house has an L-shaped floor plan with a one-story, three bay front porch supported by Tuscan style columns. The primary entrance is a single door with a transom centered in the front façade. Two windows are grouped to the left of the door and in the front face of the bay. The first floor features wood one-over-one windows. The house has a hipped-roof with lateral gable and gabled dormer on the south elevation. The gable end of the projecting front bay has a pent roof and is detailed with overlapping shingles. The windows in the gable end and dormer are flat-arched, Palladian-style windows with fixed lights.

Houston Heights was designated a MRA because it was at one time an independent municipality. Within its original boundaries are numerous buildings, many of which are individually listed in the National Register of Historic Places. Houston Heights was developed by the Omaha and South Texas Land Company in 1891. It was incorporated later as a city in 1896 and, at that time, was the earliest and largest, totally planned community in Texas. It flourished as a distinct municipality until the residents voted to be annexed by the City of Houston in 1918.

Today, the area still maintains the feeling of a distinctive, self-contained “small town” with its predominantly small 19th-century, one-story and two-story Victorian-era homes, and numerous early 20th-century bungalow style buildings. It also boasts a thriving business district on 19th Street (now predominantly antique shops and restaurants) and a large industrial district west of the business section. Also located in the neighborhood are a number of historic churches, theatres, corner stores, private and public parks, municipal facilities, schools, the Heights Branch Library and the original Houston Heights City Hall and Fire Station building, both of which have been designated as Landmarks as well as Protected Landmarks of the City of Houston.
At the March 13, 1997 public hearing of the Houston Archaeological and Historical Commission (HAHC), the HAHC discussed the expiration of the two-year temporary designation of all landmarks that City Council had previously designated when the Historic Preservation Ordinance was adopted on March 1, 1995. Since the designation had expired, the HAHC requested that the planning staff contact the owners of these landmarks to determine their interest in the HAHC initiating an application for permanent Landmark designation. Owners have been contacted on four occasions in the past and advised that the HAHC would initiate the designation of their buildings for them. Most recently, a letter from Mayor Bill White was sent certified on July 11, 2006 to each property owner of a National Register designated site in Houston Heights once again encouraging the property owner to support the HAHC in initiating the designation of their historic building as a Landmark of the City of Houston. The letter asked that the property owner respond ONLY if they did not want the HAHC to initiate said designation, and included a list of benefits for said designation. On August 24, 2006 the HAHC voted unanimously to initiate the designation of this building as a Landmark of the City of Houston, whose application for designation to be considered at the HAHC meeting on September 21, 2006.

The HAHC had instructed the planning staff previously that if any landmark had been designated either by the National Register program (N.R.), as a Recorded Texas Historic Landmark (RTHL), a State Archaeological Site (SAL), or a temporary landmark of the City of Houston, then the application would be considered for permanent Landmark designation on that merit alone, because all of the required information has been filed to obtain status. Therefore, regarding the preparation of the application, HAHC agreed to consider the application with minimal information provided to them.

RESTORATION HISTORY/CURRENT CONDITION:
The building has not been altered inappropriately since the National Register designation and is maintained in a historic manner by the current owner.
