ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT SUB-COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION

VISION

The City of Houston's future is predicated on the development of an educated workforce, and the biggest predictor of a city's success is the education level of its population. The City of Houston aims to be a city where all youth are prepared to succeed and become contributing members in positioning Houston for its global economic role in the world.

MISSION

The Economic Development Subcommittee on Education will review issues related to human capital and the education pipeline to Houston's workforce, primarily focusing on ages birth to twenty-four. It further seeks to examine more effective and efficient means to connect youth to educational and workforce development opportunities to empower youth to enter and succeed in Houston's dynamic economy.

GOALS

- Increase public awareness and dialog about the connection between the quality of life of a child and the economic consequences of what kind of person that child grows up to be.
- Use policy and funding decisions to push equity in workforce readiness, beginning at birth.
- Shape the structure of the education pipeline to align with workforce and industry needs.
