Investigative Follow-Up

An investigative team, consisting of 3 lieutenants, 8 sergeants and 33 officers, within the Special Crimes and Juvenile Divisions, has been formed to conduct follow-up investigations pertaining to the DNA Clearance Project and new sexual assault cases. The investigative team has worked diligently with internal and external partners to improve all aspects of follow-up investigations related to sexual assaults in Houston. In the coming months more detailed information regarding the number of cases assigned and cleared will be shared as well as some of the innovative techniques the Houston Police Department is utilizing to focus on a more holistic victim-centered approach to sexual assault investigations. Some investigations will require extensive follow-up while others wherein DNA testing yielded no investigative benefit will require less time to address. Metrics related to case dispositions will be shared as the team works through each follow-up investigation.

NIJ Sexual Assault Action Research Project

The NIJ Sexual Assault Action Research Project is continuing to progress and NIJ anticipates publishing research findings in the coming year. The Houston research team meets monthly to discuss items related to sexual assault investigations. One of the areas that the team is focusing efforts on is victim notification protocol. The Houston research team plans to release an innovative model for victim notification that could be adopted by other jurisdictions handling similar issues. Additionally, the Houston Police Department has developed internal modifications to move toward a victim-centered investigative approach. The NIJ research team anticipates using some of the innovative approaches implemented in Houston to create a "best practices" model for other agencies to follow.
