

Trauma Informed Care Training for Entrepreneurial Mentors

Learn how the trauma-informed care model can change the way community partners and mentors interact with each other, returning citizens and formerly incarcerated persons. This model allows individuals to feel safe, accepted and understood without judgement and exchanges that could be potentially re-traumatizing.

According to the SAMHSA GAINS Center, there is growing recognition that trauma can play a significant role in Criminal Justice involvement and a key issue warranting attention, training and education. There is consensus that high percentages of justice-involved men & women have experienced serious trauma in their lifetime, leading to challenges and barriers which increase the risk of criminal justice system involvement.

SAMHSA's GAINS Center for Behavioral Health and Justice Transformation is nationally known for its work regarding people with behavioral health needs involved in the criminal justice system.
