

Engaging Communities for the Future of Transportation

The City of Houston Planning Department invited residents from Southeast Houston for the opportunity to share their mobility-related experiences and concerns on Saturday, September 8th at Greater St. Matthew Baptist Church as part of the 2018 Southeast Mobility Plan.

The meeting consisted of interactive presentations and activities that invited attendees to share transportation challenges and concerns in their community. Residents were also encouraged to visit various workstations where they contributed their thoughts and opinions on topics such as bike safety, roadway congestion, A.D.A. access, transit, walking, intersections, and overall mobility.

"I really appreciated the interactive format; it provided for meaningful engagement." said Debra Walker, member of the Sunnyside Community. "This plan is vital for improving the overall transit safety in neighborhoods."

Community input is essential for the 2018 Southeast Mobility Plan, which will address short, mid and long-term multimodal mobility planning efforts. If you were unable to attend, we welcome your comments regarding mobility. Please visit the Southeast Houston Mobility Interactive GIS Map and track your specific comments and concerns.
